

LucidShape

Overview

An engineer wanted to optimize an automotive lighting design setup. The engineer compared light distributions from different parameter settings and noted it was complicated to find exactly the same measurement point on different sensor diagrams for analysis. The engineer chose to display measurement points and list the results manually.